Limiting Belief: “Not Knowing is the Problem”

- Emphasizes an unsustainable approach
- Reflects one-size-fits-all application
- Fails to measure progress or improvement
- Doesn't provide meaningful reinforcement

Liberating Truth: “Elite Training Transfers Beliefs”

- Sustained Learning. Develop leaders who are always learning.
- Individual Application. Equip leaders to apply concepts to their unique contexts.
- Targeted Development. Identify growth areas and track progress.
- Shared Accountability. Create spaces of belonging, encouragement, and support.

Pillar One: Sustained Learning

- One training delivers information, but ongoing learning cultivates and reinforces beliefs and values.
- Our approach: multiple ongoing forms of learning with some repetition.
- Our gift: “Plan My Program” Tool

Pillar Two: Individual Application

- Training teaches concepts, but the real impact comes from application.
- Our approach: individualized, one-on-one coaching.
- Our gift to you: “Talk Like a Coach” book

Pillar Three: Targeted Development

- Two types of assessments:
 - Strengths - “This is what I naturally do well.”
 - Competency - “This is what’s currently going well.”
- Both are important, but competency assessments are how we make sure the development is “sticking.”
- Our approach: assessing leaders before, during, and after programs.
- Our gift to you: “Ignite” survey and workbook

Pillar Four: Shared Accountability

- Telling yourself you'll do something is like writing it down in pencil. Telling someone else is like writing it in pen.
- Our approach: forming small cohorts of leaders who meet together on a regular basis.
- Our gift to you: “More Than a Workshop”
LinkedIn Community
